LOUISVILLE, Ky. (WDRB Fox 41) -- Newly-elected Louisville Mayor Greg Fischer calls it a "Day of Service" and on Saturday, people from all around the city participated.

People volunteered their time working at places like Habitat for Humanity, the Saint Joseph's Children's Home and the Parkland Boys and Girls Club.

A group with Volunteers of America painted the inside of the Shelby Street Substance Abuse Treatment Campus.

"The mayor understands what an integral part that non-profits are to the community and I think that we are going to see a lot of support from the administration and we are absolutely thrilled that this is his first big act as mayor," said Tandee Ogburn, Volunteers of America.

Fischer signed the "Day of Service" proclamation one day after entering office as his first executive order.
